

SOURCE PHOTOGRAPHIC MAGAZINE AT MEDIA SPACE

Source Magazine research trip to find new photography for future issues: Monday 25th November.

As part of research for future issues the editor of Source Magazine will be organising meetings with individual photographers and artists to find out about their new photographic work. The meetings are an opportunity to directly introduce a new piece of work to one of the editors. This is one way Source finds new work for publication in the 'portfolio pages' section of Source Magazine.

What is Source Magazine

Source is a magazine for contemporary photography distributed nationally and internationally in print and as a digital edition. More details and an archive of back issues at www.source.ie

The Process

We will be arranging a series of meetings with photographers at Media Space at the Science Museum after an initial pre-selection process. It's free at all stages but unfortunately that also includes no fee for publication.

If you are interested in attending you should email a pdf with up to 8 images and contained within it up to three paragraphs of text that give a background to your new work along with your name, contact phone number and web address. Files must be no more than 15mb. Emails should be sent to john@source.ie with Media Space in the subject line.

We will then look through all the submissions and select eight photographers to meet with, for half an hour on the day, to discuss their project in more detail.

This work then feeds its way into more general editorial discussions about what we publish on the 'portfolio pages' in future issues. We look at all the submissions so even if we can't meet you on the day it's a good way to introduce us to your work.

What are we looking for?

New previously unpublished bodies of photographic work (unpublished can include artist's books in editions of less than 200). The best way to get a flavor of what we do is to look at the artist's pages on the archive section of our web site www.source.ie

To give us focus Source on its portfolio pages only publishes work made in the UK or Ireland, or by photographers based in the UK or Ireland.

Final submission deadline is 10th November 5pm.
